Mach 1 Global Services Selects CargoWise edi to Implement ediEnterprise ERP Solution

- Freight Forwarder Adds Increased Integrated International Visibility -

Chicago, IL USA, May 08, 2008 — CargoWise™ edi, a leading provider of integrated international supply chain logistics management systems, announced that international air freight forwarder Mach 1 Global Services, based in Tempe, Arizona, has replaced its software system with CargoWise edi's award-winning ediEnterprise software solution to increase its international supply chain functionality.

In making the announcement, Cris Arens, president of CargoWise edi, said: "Mach 1's previous system was not able to keep up with its international growth and customer demands. The company asked us to provide an updated and fully integrated ERP-based platform that would provide increased operating functionality and supply chain visibility for customers in order to assist with its global expansion. By implementing our ediEnterprise solution, CargoWise edi was able to increase Mach 1's supply chain management and functionality to meet its growing customer demands."

CargoWise edi installed several ediEnterprise modules to increase the visibility of global shipments, including: ediForwarder, ediDocManager and its ediWebTracker, ediEnterprise's online Web portal. CargoWise edi also provided a variety of consulting services to deliver an end-to-end software solution for Mach 1. The company is currently live with the ediEnterprise solution in the U.S., Mexico and Singapore and will be adding the software system to additional locations in the near future.

"CargoWise edi has vastly upgraded our ability to provide greater supply chain visibility and shipment status reports for our customers," said John Gray, vice president of administration for Mach 1. "By replacing our outdated AS400 system with the CargoWise ediEnterprise system we now have the ability to display dispatch and operational data on large screen plasma displays in customer service and national account control centers. The EDI interchange integration with Mach 1 customers also enables us to promote our new capabilities to current customers as well as prospects as we continue to build our international customer base. It's a wonderful new asset for the company."

"We are witnessing many customers moving away from proprietary in-house legacy software developments to avoid large investments in technical staff and hardware and moving toward more flexible, integrated and cost-efficient outsourced platform models as the need to move freight more quickly with greater access to global supply chain information increases," summarized Arens. "Customers don't want to get caught up in add-on expenses to legacy software systems, but would rather concentrate on their core competencies of moving freight and outsource their IT operations."
